GLOUCESTER BRAVE DEATH LIFE SAVERS RESCUED 6 ON WRECK

5 Big Fires; Daring Rescues From Flames
SCORES NEAR DEATH

Heroine Badly Burned Rescuing Child in Dwelling House.

Department Works Desperately With Thermometer at Freezing Point.

Daring rescues, thrilling escapes and the serious injury of at least one woman and one man marked five fires that kept the Boston department on the jump at an early hour today, resulting from the severe cold spell that demanded additional heat.

Miss Margaret Jennings proved herself a heroine by arousing five families, containing seventeen members, who were in imminent danger from flames in the building at No. 28 Arnold street, in carrying a six-year-old girl to safety the brave young woman was herself painfully burned.

Allston Dwelling Razed.
The fifth fire burned to the ground the residence of Arthur A. Cooper, at No. 12 Haskell street, Allston. All of the men here of the family made their escape, the fire not happening until 9:30 o'clock. It was caused by the throwing out of water from a fire which started around the chimney of the fire in the palatial home of A. Spaulding Weld, a real estate dealer, of No. 12 Revere street, Jamaica Plain.

Mrs. A. G. Weld, mother of Mr. Weld, was overcome by smoke.

Mrs. Weld was carried from the house.

DEATH FOLLOWS IN WAKE OF COLD WAVE

UNIDENTIFIED MAN FOUND FROZEN; ALL NEW ENGLAND SHIVERS.

With an unknown man found dead, frozen to death on the doorsteps of the Charlesbank Gymnasium in the West End of Boston today, came the first death report as the result of the cold wave which holds Boston and New England in its grip today, the coldest day this winter.

The temperature on the street in Boston early today and in the suburbs ranged at zero or from one to two degrees below zero, according to the accuracy of the various thermometers. The Weather Bureau's official list of temperatures, taken on top of the postoffice building, shows that the coldest point was reached at 6 o'clock this morning, when the temperature was 1 degree above zero, or a drop of 53 degrees since Thursday night.

The body of the man who was found frozen to death has not been identified.

Fair and Warmer.

The man was 5 feet 8 inches in height, weighed about 155 pounds, and was about forty years of age. He was clad in a dark suit, light topcoat, white underwear and new lace shoes. In his pockets were found a mirror, bag of soap, a pocketbook, containing ten cents and a box of cologne.

Here is the local forecast:
Fair and warmer tonight. Sunday, generally cloudy and warmer, and probably cleared by snow. Brisk westerly winds.

The coldest winter recorded in the United States and Canada at 8 o'clock today was 34 degrees below zero at White River, Ontario, on Lake Superior. In Men on Three-Masted Schooner Bessie C. Beach Saved from Stranded Craft When Nearly Overcome by Exposure in Blizzard---Rescuers Forced to Drag Life Boat for 6 Miles in Face of Biting Gale.

GLOUCESTER, Dec. 8.—After dragging their heavy lifeboat for six miles overland in the teeth of a bitter blizzard, the crew of the Gloucester Life-Saving Station rescued six men from the rigging of the three-masted schooner Bessie C. Beach, which went ashore early to-day on the rocks on Wingsheek Beach.

The life-savers were none too soon, for three of the schooner's crew were helpless from the cold when taken off, and the others were in little better plight.

Men Cling for Hours to Rigging.

For hours the seamen of the schooner, which was bound for New York from a port in Maine, laden with stone, clung to the rigging of their schooner after she had struck on the rocks until dawn came. They set their signals of distress and awaited rescue.

The sails were torn in shreds and blown from the masts shortly after midnight, when the schooner was first sighted. Her crew did everything to keep her from the shore, but the storm had raised a terrible sea and the vessel was soon helpless.

The crew of the Gloucester Life-Saving Station were soon notified. The distance was too great to even think of making way through the sea, and it was impossible to get horses to drag their heavy lifeboat, so the life-savers took hold of their boat and dragged it painfully foot by foot for six miles along the beach in the face of a cruel wind.

SIGNAL FOR HELP.

All the time the little schooner was pulling harder and harder on Wingsheek.

"NO BILLS" FOR MAYOR AND SIMON DONOVAN

GRAND JURY REPORTS ON FENWAY AND "RE-PUBLIC" CHARGES.

The charges that have been made against Simon A. Donovan in connection with the Fenway scandal, and the investigation of them by the Grand Jury, resulted in the announcement to-day that "no bill" had been found. This, it is believed, is the final consideration of the connection of the contractor with the work in the Back Bay that has been so much criticized.

Mr. Donovan has been under fire of one kind or another for his work in the Fenway for about a year. He had the contract for pumping out St. Mary's Brook, and seemed to make much headway at it. When District Attorney French brought the Fenway case he reported that Donovan should have done his job for $125,000, although he had been paid at that time over $150,000 and the work was

CALL ON "L" TO TELL WHY CARS ARE COLD

RAILROAD COMMISSIONERS ASK PRESIDENT BANCROFT TO EXPLAIN NEGLIGENCE.

Because of the numerous complaints that have reached the Board of Railroad Commissioners about the freight interior of the cars of the Boston Elevated system, General William A. Bancroft, president of the railway, was asked in a letter to-day to explain the negligence of the company.

The communication, which was signed by James F. Jackson, chairman of the board, asks for information as to the provisions made by the company since last winter for the proper heating of the cars. The law provides that the cars shall be heated during October, November, December, January, February, March and April, and it may be fined $25 for each trip a car makes in violation of these provisions.

Following is the letter sent to the company.

GUINER LEPER ON LINN BOILER EXPLOSION A SECOND WARNING!

25,000 COTTON WORKERS GET RAISE IN PAY

INSTRUCTS CHIEF SHAW TO INVESTIGATE ACCIDENT AND PLACE THE BLAME.

Determined to investigate the explosion of the boiler in the P. J. Harney shoe factory in Lynn, Governor Curtis Shaw, today called upon Chief Shaw of the Massachusetts State Police for a full report on the explosion and the conclusions of the Bureau of Boiler Inspection. Chief Shaw, today, to a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter, said:

"The Governor has called on us for our report on the Harney boiler explosion in Lynn. It will be sent to him as soon as we can prepare it. There may be legislation growing out of this affair. It is a serious matter, and, of course, the effort must have the first information from the public. It was an eighteen-foot lap seam boiler, twenty-two inches in diameter of the horizontal, tubular pattern, as has been described. It was ten years old and had been in service for some time."

It was inspected on May 6, last, and pronounced to be perfect. This inspection was by the Hartford Boiler Inspection Insurance Company and this report was regularly filed, which, with our report, was sent to the Governor.

At the Governor's office today Secretary Getchell said: "Governor Curtis is not prepared to discuss the matter of the boiler explosion now. The Governor must first see what the situation is before he can decide whether or not it is a matter in which he should interfere. He is not a legislator, but a chief of the State Police."

Chief Shaw of the Boiler Inspection Department of the State Police, asked if his department would like to take any steps in proposed legislation looking to the more rigid inspection of boilers, said:

"Of course, I have pronounced views on this matter, which I shall submit to the legislative committee. We are not now prepared to say that the initial inspection was defective. It was not. The boiler was in good condition, and no defect was discovered."

"Cause of Explosion Undermined."

"The boiler was of 1895 make. It was inspected by me as well qualified for this work as any in Massachusetts. We are not now prepared to say that the initial inspection was defective. It was not. The boiler was in good condition, and no defect was discovered."

"It is not true that any defect in the boiler at the Harney shoe factory in Lynn was ever discovered by us or reported to us. The boiler was regularly inspected on May 6, last, and pronounced to be perfect. It was ten years old and had been in service for some time."

"The boiler was of 1895 make. It was inspected by me as well qualified for this work as any in Massachusetts. We are not now prepared to say that the initial inspection was defective. It was not. The boiler was in good condition, and no defect was discovered."

"It is the purpose of the boiler inspectors and experts in Massachusetts to ask the next session of the State Legislature which meets in January, to pass new and more thorough boiler inspection laws. The consensus of opinion is that the new law should make it obligatory that hydrostatic tests of all boilers in the State be made, and if possible to prohibit entirely the use of lap-seam boilers."

INSPECTORS SHOULD HAVE MORE POWER

By Prof. Thomas Hawley.
Of the Hawley School of Engineering, Boston.

I WENT to Lynn yesterday and looked over the ground on the site of the explosion. The boiler which was responsible for the disaster was made of three courses, was seventy-two inches in diameter and of three-eighths inch steel plate. The middle course exploded and was flattened out, but it had not moved from its position in the setting course. This part of the boiler was the one mainly responsible for the explosion.

The back tubes I found had moved about eight feet into the engine room. The front course was not broken, on account of it being under the debris nearby.

Workers were uncovering the middle shell when I got there and when it was uncovered it disclosed a crack the whole length of the longitudinal seam, about five feet long. It showed the rivets on both sides of the seam, and the plate was considerably distorted on this side.

Attached to this shell was a portion of the front course. The first course along its longitudinal seam was cracked in exactly the same manner as the middle course. The longitudinal seam of the front course also shows evidence of a fracture along its length.

Plenty of Water in Boiler.

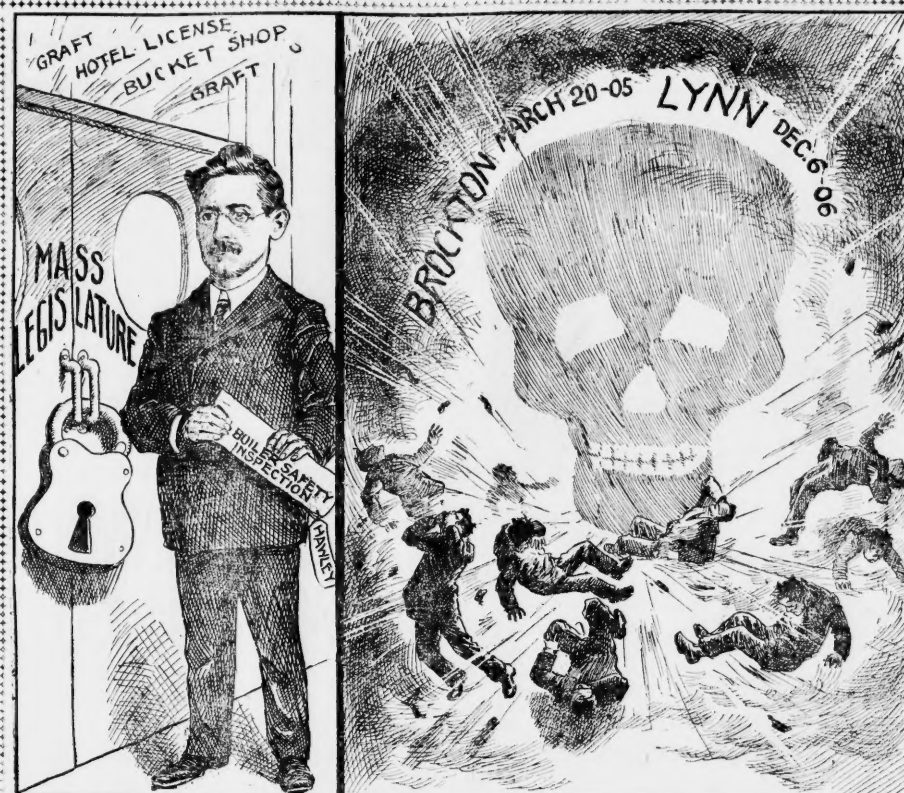

The fusible plug was found to be in good condition, which indicates that there was plenty of water in the boiler at the time. The safety valve had not been found, but I was assured by the engineer in the adjoining room that he had heard the safety valve blowing off several times before the explosion, which would indicate that the safety valve was in good condition.

The throttle of the engine was found to be closed, showing that the engineer had not started the engine, indicating that there was no sudden shock, such as commonly precipitates such explosions. The engine therefore derived its power from the steam in the boiler, which was under pressure at the time of the explosion. It was found that the boiler was under a steady pressure with the engine shut off. The boiler inspectors were hunting for the front plates when the explosion occurred.

When boilers with lap-seams are built the plates are rolled as nearly circular as possible, but when they leave the rolls they cannot be perfectly round. The end must be rounded down by heavy hammering while the boiler is in the shop. A rough edge undoubtedly starts a crack.

Crack Was Warning.

When the joint is completed the plates do not form a true circle, but when in use the pressure forming a circle draws the plates at the stiff joint and continuous bending back and forward with the pulsation of the boiler causes the crack which

"A crack along the lap-seam of a boiler was the cause of the Brockton disaster. Closely following that the BOSTON AMERICAN called attention to the danger in the use of lap-seam boilers, and I made prediction, which I repeat now with emphasis, that there will be more explosions in the near future from the same cause unless something done to restrict the use of these large lap-seam boilers."

"At that time I drafted a bill covering this matter and presented it to the Legislature, then in session, and a hearing upon it was given by the Rules Committee. The substance of the bill was that no more lap-seam boilers over forty-two inches in diameter should be permitted to be installed, and that the State boiler inspectors should be required to thoroughly inspect all those at present in use, with special reference to the discovery of lap cracks, which are peculiar to that kind of a boiler; and that a hydrostatic test should be made of all such boilers, which is the only test that may discover such cracks, although even this test sometimes fails."

"The Committee on Rules gave a very short hearing, and it was quite apparent during the hearing that nothing would be done about the bill. The committee reported that the bill should go over to the next General Court, although I warned the committee that these accidents were liable to happen at any time."

ONLY 10 INSPECTORS TO 30,000 BOILERS

By Arthur M. Huddell.
President of the Massachusetts State Association of Steam Engineers, Vice-President of the International Association of Steam Engineers, and President of the Boston Central Labor Union.

THERE are boilers in Massachusetts that no State official has even seen or heard of. And the only wonder to engineers who are acquainted with the dangers attending their occupation is that there are not more explosions.

Mr. Thomas Hawley, the engineering expert, immediately after the Brockton explosion, endeavored to reduce the number of inspectors to 10, and to provide for the inspection of every lap seam boiler, and the committee on rules refused to allow it to be so stated. We believe that the legislators who turned down this legislation are responsible for these accidents. They probably see their mistake now.

I personally believe we would be justified in asking that the boiler inspection department be increased to 100 men, and that the district police under the inspection force, but have not met with a successful result.

For many years the engineers have tried to increase the efficiency of the boiler inspection department of the State and have believed that the State should inspect all boilers. Annually we have endeavored to have more inspectors added to the boiler inspection force, but have not met with a successful result.

REAL FIRST 'TEDDY' BEAR

MANAT WHITE'S
Furnished Animals for Famous Noah's Ark Exhibit at Great Store.

ORIGINALS WERE ALIVE

Every Boston boy and girl will be interested to learn that Mr. Benson, who furnished the animals for the famous Noah's Ark exhibit in R. H. White Company's Toyland, on the third floor of the great store, is the man who secured the original real "Teddy" bear, the very first of all the "Teddy" bears in the country.

Mr. Benson's story of how he got the first "Teddy" bear is very interesting. He told the story to a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter, and here it is:

"During my exhibit at the New York Sportsman's Show in Madison Square Garden in 1902, I bought two little baby bears, about ten days old, from N. E. Corbier, of Quebec, Province of Canada. They were pocket editions of the bear family, that was all. You could easily hold them on the palm of your hand.

"I had to feed them every two hours on hot malted milk. They wouldn't wait for their meals, either, without a fearful fuss. I learned this the first night I had them. I took them to my room in the hotel and had them drop off to sleep when they set up a wailing for their malted milk. I got up and heated water and made it for them, but the night clerk, hearing the wailing, ordered me to keep quiet.

"It's two naughty children here which make the trouble," I said. "All right, you've got to clear out with them. This is no nursery," the clerk said. So I moved. I went to another hotel. Two hours later, when my baby bears were hungry, the same thing was repeated, and the night clerk made me leave with my bears, no matter how I pleaded for mercy.

"Finally I paid a big price and got a room at J. B. O'Connell's, where I was allowed to stay. My bears thrived and grew sleek and fat specimens. During the last week of the Madison Square Garden show I sold the bears to Theodore Roosevelt, who then lived in Madison Avenue. He bought the first real 'Teddy' bears for his children, and finally gave them to the Washington Zoo.

"This was the start of the 'Teddy' bears. They have been prominent ever since in newspapers and everywhere, and this year the manager of R. H. White Company's Toyland can hardly buy enough of the bears or any for animals to supply the demand.

ACTRESSES TO POUR TEA AT SHOW OF THE SOCIETY OF ODD BRUSHES

LOUIS KRONBERG'S PORTRAIT OF GEORGE PROCTOR AT ODD BRUSH SHOW

Maudie Adams and Viola Allen
Named as Afternoon Hostesses at Art Exhibition.

By Eleanor Ames.

The gallery of the Boston Art Club was the meeting place last night from 8 to 10 o'clock of representatives of the worlds of society and art, when the Society of Odd Brushes opened its second exhibition, with an invitation private view of some delightful paintings.

The exhibition will be open until December 22 inclusive, from 9 until 5 o'clock daily with the exception of Sundays. There will be a tea next Thursday and on Tuesday and Thursday of the week following, at which prominent society women will preside.

It is possible that Maudie Adams and Viola Allen will pour tea at some of the afternoon receptions. The Society of Odd Brushes is not quite two years old, but has enjoyed a most successful and interesting career. It was formed with five members, each an earnest, original artist, and each aiming at the attainment of the beautiful. The members are: Maudie Adams, Louis Kronberg, Will Jenkins, C. Scott White and Frank Jackson, composed the formative quintet, and during the last year, J. W. Courtney, M. D., and Frederick

W. Colburn have been added as honorary members. About forty canvases are shown, and in addition to the pictures there is a marvellous first view of rare musical instruments, showing the artistic trend of modern taste, and made by no less eminent an authority than Arnold Dolmetsch.

These include a Virginal made in Antwerp by Johannes Rokkers in 1620, and which Mr. Dolmetsch has restored; three wonderful fiddles, completely made of chords; a seven-stringed Viola-da-Gamba and a Psalter.

The portraits are varied in personality but share in common a splendid strength of character. The portrait of a woman past middle life is worthy of study. There has been no effort to efface the marks of time, but the beauty of experience has been brought to light.

A portrait of a blonde "Lady in Black" is striking, and the picture of the artist's daughter, interesting in its absolute refinement and repose. It is in great contrast to the portrait of a girl at the other end of the line, which, though most simply treated, shines with life.

Rich Color and Drawing. England and France, New Brunswick and Nova Scotia Landscapes make up Mr. Frank Jackson's water colors, of which "The Thames at Evening," with its effect of moonlight striking the water through broken clouds holds the attention longest. Noteworthy, too, is the life of a French market place on Friday morning, with its brilliant richness of color, and bold drawing, and the brilliant, misty painting of Mr. Will Jenkins's descriptive studies, and are in sharp contrast to the exquisite detailed pen and ink drawings and illuminated card of arms he also shows.

Many Interesting Canvases. Those who have seen the portrait are enthusiastic over it and Mrs. Gardner has passed favorably on it, not only as a likeness, but as a work of art.

Other very interesting canvases in Mr. Kronberg's collection include his marvellous "Judith," with its remarkable lighting and warm flesh tones; "A Daughter of the Orient," in which the green wall which the blackened dancer holds before her face is brought out vividly by the red rose in her hair, and the brilliant color dropped on the floor at her feet.

"The Parrot," is another of Mr. Kronberg's pictures which shows this combination of red and green. It is the portrait of a woman, waiting a lover, with a look of bright scarlet, while a green parrot perches on her outstretched finger. "Breeding for the Dance," is to my mind the most interesting of all the pictures. It shows an old woman with grey hair and wrinkled face, trying a brand pink robe about the waist of a white-robed child.

On the child's face is the expression and the look of a dancer.

SAY LINGCOLN CLUB BACKS ONE FOR SENATE

Churchill and Remick Declare Entire Efforts Given to Getting Right Laws.

MEMBERS' OBJECTS LOCAL

Special to the Boston American. CONCORD, N. H., Dec. 8.—Judge James W. Remick, president of the Lincoln Republican Club, and Winston Churchill, leader of the reform forces in the recent gubernatorial fight, make the following statement regarding the candidacy of George B. Leighton for the United States Senate to succeed General Burnham:

"The club has explicitly declared that it will have no candidate for United States Senator and nothing has occurred to modify that declaration. Mr. Leighton is not in any sense the candidate of the club, and the club's representatives in the Legislature are under no obligation whatever to support him.

"Now is the time when our members are devoting their efforts to securing the enactment of laws towards carrying out the purposes for which the club was organized, instead of discussing the question of who of our number shall have this or that office.

"In connection with the matter C. W. Churchill, secretary to Mr. Leighton, said to a BOSTON AMERICAN correspondent: 'His candidacy on the ground of his Lincoln Republicanism. The executive committee of the Lincoln Club has said it would not, as a club, support any particular candidate. Mr. Leighton has asked it to do so; it is as a Republican and a citizen of the State that he is before the people.'

"The attitude of the executive committee does not, politically, disadvantage the members of the club and it will not be allowed to interfere with the freedom of members in making official selection. To secure it to do so would diminish the organization that has been, is, and should continue to be a power for good."

BURNHAM LEADS SENATE FIGHT

MANCHESTER, N. H., Dec. 8.—United States Senator Henry E. Burnham, who is a candidate to succeed himself, arrived home early today from Washington and at once took personal charge of his campaign. A new term of six years is to be handed out by the Legislature which meets on the first Wednesday in January. New Hampshire politicians say that Judge Burnham hasn't much work before him. It is generally understood that he already has the personal and signed pledges of many more than a majority of the Republican caucus.

LABOR NEWS

The question of boiler inspection in Massachusetts will be one of the most vital questions to be considered at the annual State convention of Steam Engineers' Unions, to be held tomorrow in N. S. E. Hall, No. 505 Washington street. In his annual report, State President Arthur M. Hurdell will recommend that a convention be held to secure a law providing that all boilers be inspected by the State and that the number of boiler inspectors be increased to ten. The session will begin at 11 a. m. and a banquet will be held at the Hotel. Reports will show that the membership in unions in Massachusetts has increased twelve per cent during the year.

SPORTS COVERED FOR THE BOSTON AMERICAN BY ITS CORPS OF EXPERTS

LAST NIGHT IN THEIR SECOND MEETING LAST NIGHT AT LOS ANGELES ATTELL BEAT WALSH IN 8 ROUNDS

The little Boston man was given a bad beating in eight rounds before he was put away by the wonderful Attell.

ABE ATTELL.

JIMMY WALSH.

Boston Boy Again Loses Fight for the Featherweight Title

WALSH BEATEN BY ATTELL

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 8.—Abe Attell, the featherweight champion of the world, demonstrated his superiority over Jimmy Walsh of Boston by practically two knockouts in the eighth round last night. After a minute of fighting at the start of the eighth, Abe had Walsh in an almost helpless condition. A towel was thrown into the ring from Walsh's corner, and the seconds sprang into the ring. One second endeavored to make Walsh stop, but the little fighter and his remaining seconds insisted that the towel had been thrown by a stranger.

Walsh was down, but scrambled to his feet in a flash. Attell met him with a left to the face, and a right followed. Walsh was getting wobbly. Then someone in the crowd threw a towel into the ring, and the referee stopped the fight.

Walsh was down, but scrambled to his feet in a flash. Attell met him with a left to the face, and a right followed. Walsh was getting wobbly. Then someone in the crowd threw a towel into the ring, and the referee stopped the fight.

Walsh was down, but scrambled to his feet in a flash. Attell met him with a left to the face, and a right followed. Walsh was getting wobbly. Then someone in the crowd threw a towel into the ring, and the referee stopped the fight.

HOT WORK AT START.
The battle was scheduled to go twenty rounds, but it was plain before a minute of fighting that Walsh was in a bad way. Before a dozen blows had been exchanged, Attell came in with a right and sent Walsh reeling. Walsh came back with a left, but Attell's right hand was on him. Attell's right hand was on him. Attell's right hand was on him.

STARTED FIGHT AGAIN.
It was a mistake. Immediately Walsh tried to get into the fight again. Seconds told him to stop, but he was not to be deterred. He came back with a left, but Attell's right hand was on him. Attell's right hand was on him. Attell's right hand was on him.

Walsh Breathes Hard but Keeps Fighting.
ROUND SIX.—Walsh reached the nose with a straight left and Attell got a straight left to the face, and then planted a hard right in the pit of Jimmy's stomach. Walsh's left reached Attell's stomach and after an exchange of lefts landed a hard uppercut to the face. The boys clinched. When separated Attell scored with three straight lefts to the mouth and right to the jaw. Attell's left reached the jaw and right to the body. Walsh was breathing hard but kept fighting. Attell's right hand was on him. Attell's right hand was on him.

Attell Follows Walsh Around Ring.
ROUND SEVEN.—Attell received a left left in the face and sent three of the same kind to Walsh's face. In a clinch both reached the jaw. Each landed light rights, and Walsh poked in two lefts to the face. Attell blocked left and right leads and a blow on the chin. After following his man around the ring, using a left to the face and slipping over a right to the jaw and body. Walsh has a bleeding nose and badly swollen lips. Attell used straight lefts to the nose and then crossed with three rights to the side of the face without return.

Fight by Rounds

Attell Entered the Ring at 9:30. Walsh weighed in at 120 and Attell at 122 pounds. Attell was seconded by Frank McDonald, Johnny Hogan, Kid Dalton and Kid Barry. Behind Walsh were Jack Twinn, Sullivan, Eddie Kevin, Billy Connor and Jack Keener. Tommy Burns was referee. Following is the fight by rounds:

Walsh Only Saved by Gong.

Beats Tattoo on Walsh's Body.
ROUND TWO.—Walsh got a left to the head and Attell returned one to the jaw. Walsh received a terrific blow on the head and returned two stinging lefts full in the face. Attell's right hand was on him. Attell's right hand was on him. Attell's right hand was on him.

Attell Hits Walsh Everywhere.

In Reference to Deal of Phoebe W., W. J. FURBUSH REELES are curious, writes L. I. Flower. Now in justice to my friends, of whom I think I have a few in the Maritime Provinces, as well as myself, I would ask similar space to make a statement.

Two years ago I raised a small stable of horses, four in number, in the Maritime Provinces, and won in the vicinity of $1,000. At that time, as now, murrums and murrums are the order of the day. These horses, as they call them, should be barred from competition or not, we heard. That this sentiment had been put forward, I was informed by the fact that in 1903 and 1904 American horses were raced there as previously. The gentlemen, whom I think, perhaps, the better class of horsemen, seemed to think to bar horses from the stables would be a removal upon their sportsmanship. The decision I leave entirely to them, but I wish to say that never have I received more kindly, courteous treatment than that accorded me by the Provincial horsemen, one and all.

Tried to Find Flower.
As to Mr. L. I. Flower, I have tried to ascertain where he is, and whether he is speaking as the representative of the horsemen, or if he is a self-constituted commissioner. Had he been an attendant upon the race I should likely have met him, and he at all prominent in affairs pertaining to the horse, he should certainly be known to some one.

There are wrong statements in his communication; errors of fact. I will simply state that I am not a member of the Shamrock Club, and I have never been a member of the Shamrock Club. I have owned Phoebe W. five times in all, twice this year, once last year, and once the year before last. I have never sold her, and I have never sold her to any one. I have never sold her to any one. I have never sold her to any one.

Conditions of Sale.
Furthermore, the horse was to remain in my stable until these notes were paid, and were the notes not promptly met I had full privileges of taking the horse. I went to St. John several times to bring Phoebe W. back, but the horse was not there. Finally, I received a check from Mr. Jack, a banker of St. John, for the remainder of the amount due, amounting to nearly one-half the cost price of $3,500.

JUDGE PARKER SOLD FOR $7,000.
LUXINGTON, Ky., Dec. 8.—The four-year-old gelding, Judge Parker, sold for $7,000 by J. M. Moore (2041), dam Paragon (2042), sire of the famous Judge. The horse was sold to J. M. Moore of Lexington, Ky. The horse was sold to J. M. Moore of Lexington, Ky.

NEW YORK COPS ARREST BIGS.
NEW YORK, Dec. 8.—While Wymon and Dick Grubbs, fighters, and Referee Ben Hagen were arrested last night at the stage of the Brooklyn A. C. when Wymon and Grubbs entered the ring for the first bout. They are held in $500 bail to appear in court this morning.

HAMILTON WON FIVE-MILE RACE.
Clarence L. Hamilton, one of the local speed roller skaters, was the victor in the five-mile championship race held at the Park Square rink last evening. His victory was witnessed by 8,000 persons, and the time was remarkable—13 minutes and 20 seconds being the time recorded in Hamilton. There were two starters, with Fred White of Chelsea the favorite, and Hamilton, who defeated him in the second, and Phillips from Providence was third.

DOYLE WITH BREWERS.
President Haverhill of the Milwaukee Baseball Club of the American Association announced that he has signed Jack Doyle, the one-time famous big leaguer, as manager of the Brewers for next season. Doyle had charge of the Des Moines club in the Western League last season, and landed them easy winners of the pennant.

for the safety of patrons of the better demonstrations at Dudley square. The police arrived on Friday morning, when the hour, beginning about 8:50 o'clock.

The demonstrators were killed in the mad scramble. It's a tribute to the good sense of the thousands of demonstrators, many of whom were arrested by the Boston

With the platforms crowded to their ca-
